BARNARD SOPHS WIN GREEK GAMES

The Greek Games of Barnard College, the annual contest between the freshman and sophomore classes, were held yesterday afternoon in the symnasium of Columbia University under the patronage of Mrs. Eos of Mount Olympus, who was elected goddess of the games by an overwhelming majority. The contests went along for several hours to the accompaniment of loud cheers from a throng of young women of the school and to the accompaniment also of encouraging shouts from a small group of couraging shouts from a small group of uninvited young men who were espe-cially keen about the lyric contest and

hurdling for form

The sophomores entered to music that was a great deal harder to pronounce, theing Tschalkowsky's "March Siav," or "March Thaw," or something like that, with verbal improvements by Miss Lenore Guinylung of the class of 1919. Then Miss Dorothy Brockway of the class of 1919 mounted the altar and delivered the invocation and libation to Mrs. Eos, after which the games proceeded to their logical conclusion.
